- (a) Our family has endured, and successfully conquered private behavioral issues. I am very proud to say that personal and family therapy have resulted in a family dynamic that is much stronger than before. The ability to calmly and rationally communicate, handle and resolve emotional issues is an attribute that I believe will translate very well to the judicial position and one that I believe all judges should possess. Private practice for 30 years has exposed me to all types of personalities and difficult situations, The ability to navigate those situations and persons to achieve a suitable result is very important.
