Someone needs to seriously look at the personnel practices of DOR, when it comes to how employees are treated. They protect themselves at all costs no matter what, even if there are allegations from several employees.

I wanted to share my feedback on the treatment of revenue officers at DOR. I have not been there long, but when I arrived I was confused as to what RO's did. When I arrived many were all gathered around with feet upon their desk, on cellphones or blatantly disrespecting their supervisor. They never went out in the field, but rather stay in the office and criticize the Taxpayer Assistance officers. They never contributed to helping but rather complaining about why the TAO's didn't do this or that for their (RO's) taxpayers. Instead of getting out in the field to do their work, many of them rather complain all day! They are lazy and entitled. Many had supervisors who have been here forever and can't find their way out of a paper bag! The leadership was very unprepared and VERY relaxed. It is in my opinion why we as RO's are in the predicament that they are in now. We are being punished for SUPERVISORS sitting around allowing their employees to do their work and run the office. Now that there is structure, many of these lazy employees are simply upset that they have to work to show their numbers. There was no punishment for the supervisors who created this environment. RO's that have been here since the 80's are now upset that they are looked over, however never considered that if I applied and looked over, that maybe that would cause them to look at themselves and figure out why and take an action versus crying and pointing the finger. There are officers who work their cases and do what we are supposed to do, but our voices are drowned out by the cry babies. Sherrie McTeer came along and provided opportunities for those who did the work and was evident in our numbers versus the "good old boy" system where managers brought their friends with them to the top, with being unqualified. Please just know that many people that are complaining about being treated poorly, more than likely haven't worked in the past few years.
