Disabilities and Special Needs, Department

As a former 20 year employee of this agency I can say it was poorly run and routinely put residents and staff in positions of possible danger. Positions were routinely reclassified and their requirements changed so that only certain people would be qualified for them while keeping other people from applying. Staffing ratios were routinely ignored and money was misspent on redoing offices and ground beautification rather than client services. Employees who spoke out were either fired or demoted. A fundamental change needs to occur in this agency which has too many high paid chiefs and not enough direct care workers
