Veterans receive full Thanksgiving dinner

Tarneisha Mitchell and other volunteers served about 60 veterans a Thanksgiving meal Tuesday at the Lowcountry Thanksgiving Turkey Giveaway at Nichols Chapel AME Church.

In a sea of blue jeans and T-shirts, Benjamin Campbell arrived at Nichols Chapel AME Church in a dapper suit, silver silk necktie and patent leather shoes. It was, after all, Thanksgiving dinner.

Campbell, who served in World War II, was among 60 or so veterans who dined Tuesday on a full Thanksgiving meal at the 16th annual Lowcountry Thanksgiving Turkey Giveaway.

Benjamin Campbell, an 86-year-old WWII veteran, enjoyed a Thanksgiving meal at Nichols Chapel AME Church Tuesday.

Shelia Reid of Charleston joined in with the crowd Tuesday as they sang "Love Train" at Nichols Chapel AME Church in Charleston.

In all, the event provided those in need with about 1,200 free turkeys and 800 gift cards worth $20 each donated by grocery stores including Bi-Lo, Food Lion, Harris Teeter, Piggly Wiggly, Publix and Walmart.

This is the first year the event singled out veterans like Campbell for a sit-down turkey dinner.

"Why, this is very nice," Campbell said when a church volunteer set down his plate. He was 18 when he went overseas to serve in Okinawa, Japan, Guam and Saipan in the Mariana Islands. He will turn 87 in December.

The men sitting near him, mostly Vietnam veterans who live at Crisis Ministries, nodded in vigorous agreement.

“This is very helpful when you have no finances,” said Carl Cline, a Navy veteran who suffered a stroke eight years ago. He was especially thankful for help from volunteers and companies that, despite the economic downturn, still donated turkeys and gift cards.

“It’s hard for people to reach out a helping hand if their hands are empty,” Cline said.

Veterans with mental health problems find it hard to hold jobs because of their symptoms or medication side effects. And that means constant worry about food and housing.

The free meal eased that for a day, said Maurice Johnson, an Army veteran who served in Vietnam.

“Our homeless veterans should be taken care of,” said Nichols Chapel’s pastor, the Rev. Randolph Miller. “This is Thanksgiving, and it is a time to share.”

Hundreds of families, veterans and senior citizens lined the streets outside Nichols Chapel even after nearly 600 already jammed its sanctuary to sing, give thanks and hear from organizers, including state Sen. Robert Ford, D-Charleston; Rep. Wendell Gilliard, D-Charleston; and Rep. Chip Limehouse, R-Charleston.

While organizers delivered resounding messages of thanks, Campbell quietly finished his meal and rose from the table reserved for veterans.

He eased outside with his walker, where volunteers and the crowd still waiting in line stepped aside and nodded their respects as he passed.

So two guys shoot each other at the Waffle House, allegedly over a cigarette, and one of them dies. An old man is bound and murdered in his home, a 17-year-old is shot in a parking lot by a random passerby thug, and somebody strolls through a North Charleston neighborhood and opens fire, injuring one person and killing another.

It would be easy to say this is getting ridiculous, but we passed that exit several miles back. Although crime statistics for the year are similar to last year, it feels like the Lowcountry is in the middle of a crime wave - and you can't blame the weather. It's not the heat, it's the stupidity.

Today, state lawmakers will meet with local police officials to see what can be done to interject a little sense into the community.

They're going to have a lot to talk about. Lock 'em up

State Rep. Wendell Gilliard worked this up with Rep. Chip Limehouse and Sen. Robert Ford. They want to know how the Legislature can help here.

"Do we need more foot patrols in neighborhoods, do we need more police?" Gilliard says. "We are talking about putting more money into Crime Stoppers. We need to talk about drugs, guns in the street and how we deal with that."

These guys are going to hear the sad truth, like it or not.

"The No. 1 thing on my wish list is keeping people in jail that have committed a violent act," says North Charleston Police Chief Jon Zumalt. "They get out on bond and commit another violent act. That's the biggest complaint from my officers. They arrested somebody on drugs and illegal gun charges and a few days later, there they are again. It's frustrating."

The good guys lock up the bad guys, and the bad guys walk. It's a flaw in the system that has been discussed for years, yet nothing is done.

Zumalt says it's the same with tougher laws against illegal possession of a handgun. These are real problems.

Good luck to Gilliard, Limehouse and Ford with getting them fixed in South Carolina. It affects everyone. Gilliard and Limehouse got heavy into this issue after the shooting death of Marley Lion last month.

Gilliard was criticized for not speaking out as much when kids are shot every week in North Charleston. That did not sit well with him.

"Dr. King said, 'Whatever affects one directly, affects all indirectly.' I don't see color. When I saw that video of that senseless killing, I saw myself or my children," Gilliard says.

Whatever prompted this renewed attention to crime in the Lowcountry, it has resulted in a bipartisan look at crime, which is amazing in itself. And it's even better that the pols are talking to the pros.

"We just want to know what we can do to help," Limehouse says. "There is a total lack of respect for human life out there. We've got to work together to figure this out."

That's right, and it's good to hear. Because believe it or not, criminals don't differentiate between Hanahan, West Ashley and North Charleston.

This is everyone's problem.

Violent CRIME

PLACE: NORTH CHARLESTON CITY HALL
DATE: FRIDAY, MAY 18, 2012

The Charleston Area ranks as one of the highest in terms of violence among young people. We are losing our children. What are we going to do about it!!!

State Senator Robert Ford and Representative Wendell Gilliard, will host a summit to address the recent reports that rank greater Charleston and Charleston County as one of the top high rated violent crime communities in the country. The forum has invited from the aggregate elected and appointed communities representatives tasked with addressing these issues on a broader scale. The ultimate goal is to acknowledge and access; then open the process on how we can reduce and strategically implement violent crime reduction remedies in the greater Charleston and North Charleston communities.

We solicit and encourage members of the collective communities to join us as we seek important feedback from you the local residents, state and county elected leadership. We need your input, as we explore solutions to an alarming and ever-growing problem.
