When we raised a glass to auld lang syne and turned our calendars ahead, no one could have predicted the chaos 2020 would hold for South Carolina students, families, and educators. On behalf of the Education Oversight Committee (EOC), I wish to extend a heartfelt "thank you" to everyone who has sacrificed to continue students' education under these incredibly difficult circumstances.

I would also like to commend EOC's dedicated staff—now under the leadership of our new Executive Director¬—Matthew Ferguson, who faced the unenviable challenge of moving and starting a new job at the onset of a global pandemic! The team's on-the-ground education experience, unwavering commitment to student success, exemplary initiative, and "can-do" attitude allowed the Committee to quickly pivot to engage critical questions around the impacts of COVID-19 on South Carolina's students and public education system.

In 2020, the EOC faithfully pursued our mandate from the General Assembly to report facts, measure change, and promote student progress. That included conducting the various studies and reports required by law that you will find listed in the following pages. I am grateful for the numerous task forces, focus groups, committees, and organizations around the state and nation that assisted us in accomplishing this work; many are noted in this report.

However, the significance of the EOC's education impact extends far beyond words on paper. Since its inception, clear-eyed foresight has been the hallmark of EOC's work, and 2020 proved no exception:

Leading the Innovative eLearning Initiative

In 2018, the Committee partnered with 15 school districts to pilot a high-quality eLearning program to allow continued instruction on inclement weather days. While eLearning was never intended to sustain months of virtual instruction such as we have experience in this pandemic, best practices culled from the eLearning initiative—as well as direct expertise provided by EOC staff to districts pursuing online remote learning for the first time—have proved invaluable and continue to guide the ongoing development of new distance learning capacity across the state.

Reporting the Impacts of COVID-19 on Student Learning

As a trusted, independent source of reliable information, EOC was commissioned to review the education challenges and opportunities presented by COVID-19 and point to emerging best practices across South Carolina and the nation. Gathering a broad array of stakeholder perspectives through surveys, personal interviews, and robust data analysis, EOC delivered the first statewide look at COVID's anticipated impact on student learning. The findings were stark, if not surprising: seven (7) in ten (10) 3rd-8th graders are now projected to not be on grade level at the end of this school year. The EOC will continue to monitor and report on this crisis of learning, and lead and shape conversations about how to help South Carolina students recover and thrive.

Reviving Critical Structural Reform Conversations

In 2001, a fledging EOC delivered reports detailing the urgent need for reform to South Carolina's education governance and funding structures. In the 20 years since, what was then urgent has become a five-alarm fire. Accordingly, the Committee has commissioned a new review of South Carolina's governance statutes and engaged in robust discussions around how to sustainably and equitably fund all students, including those in public charter schools. Look for these critical conversations to continue.

Education after COVID will never look the same. Indeed, this challenge may be South Carolina's golden opportunity to push our long-struggling education system beyond the limitations of outdated paradigms to foster greater equity, flexibility, and fulfill our responsibility to support every child, wherever and however they learn best.

The work ahead is daunting and will require strong leadership and tremendous courage. But the future of our students demands nothing less. The EOC remains committed to our mission to support and illuminate this urgent work.
