AGENCY'S DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS

As a leading public regional university, the University of South Carolina Upstate delivers an outstanding, career-focused education through rigorous academics, applied research, and a vibrant campus community. Guided by its Greater 2030 strategic plan, USC Upstate's committed leadership and modern facilities support more than 50 programs so students can pursue their passions and graduate ready to meet regional workforce needs.

Founded in 1967, USC Upstate is among the South's top public regional colleges in U.S. News & World Report's 2025 Best Colleges. Located along the I-85 corridor in Spartanburg between Greenville and Charlotte, the University has a more than $624 Million annual economic impact on South Carolina and serves as a key producer of talent for the region, with nearly 5,100 students, roughly 1,300 graduates each year, and more than 33,000 alumni, many living and working in South Carolina.

USC Upstate closed the year with strong momentum in enrollment, fundraising, and workforce-relevant program growth. The university reported an increase of nearly 11% in new student enrollments in fall 2024, a baseline that set up continued gains. As FY24–25 ended, early fall 2025 projections pointed to the largest first-time class since 2019 and an overall enrollment increase of 9.2% over the prior year. Those gains were fueled by new degrees in industrial engineering, sport management and data science.

Fundraising and external support surged. In December 2024, USC Upstate secured a $4.9 million Mellon Foundation grant to scale humanities internships and student career pathways and a $2 million Bedford Falls Foundation grant for nursing scholarships. Throughout the fiscal year, USC Upstate expanded advancement gains with nearly triple the philanthropic efforts of the prior year.

Significant projects advanced student success and campus capacity. USC Upstate broke ground on a library expansion that will house a Learning Commons focused on student success and modern collaborative space; the project complements student support initiatives. The university also named the Chief Justice Donald W. Beatty Center for Justice & Society, expanding law- and justice-aligned experiential learning.

Programmatically, the year marked a pivot toward high-demand fields and "college-to-career" design. The new B.S. in Industrial Engineering, approved in December 2024, was built with a "lab-in-industry" approach and ABET-aligned design. The program focuses on community-based projects, such as infrastructure development and sustainable energy solutions. The Johnson College of Business and Economics has also implemented several career-relevant certificates to prepare students with high-demand skills such as analytics and accounting.

Athletics and reputation lifted the brand. The Spartans were led by Big South championships in women's soccer and softball. The Spartans also captured Big South championships in men's golf and baseball. These significant wins amplified USC Upstate visibility. U.S. News also provided recognitions for Top Public Schools—South, Best Colleges for Veterans, Social Mobility. These recognitions supported recruitment and alumni engagement during the fiscal year.

Internal and external factors shaping performance

Situated on the I-85 manufacturing corridor, USC Upstate leaned into industry demand for engineers, nurses, and teachers with external collaborations that shaped program launches, apprenticeships, and transfer pipelines.

USC Upstate officially launched "Greater 2030" (approved by the USC Board of Trustees March 18, 2024) and organized efforts around five pillars—Spartan Distinct, Spartan Recruit, Spartan Success, Spartan Partners, and Spartan Future—with clear early-stage results:

- Spartan Distinct (academic distinctiveness): New degrees in industrial engineering, sport management, and data science, in addition to the Beatty Center collectively differentiated Upstate in engineering, health, and legal pathways aligned to meet the needs of the Upstate region and beyond.
- Spartan Recruit (enrollment & access): The Upstate Promise Scholarship expanded, USC Upstate strengthen a partnership with OneSpartanburg to re-enroll students who have stopped out, and the reverse-transfer with Greenville Technical College expanded access to higher education opportunities. Furthermore, international recruitment rose—setting the stage for the strongest FTIC class since 2019.
- Spartan Success (student outcomes): Bridge programs in math/English addressed post-pandemic learning loss; undergraduate research and internships boosted readiness and retention; the partnership with Spartanburg Academic Movement 2030 increased FAFSA completion, centralized advising, and increased student retention supports.
- Spartan Partners (regional impact): Upstate deepened Movement 2030 collaboration and K-12 teacher pipelines reinforcing its role in talent supply. In addition, record grants and fundraising advanced facilities and student resources while strengthening long-term financial footing.
- Spartan Future (infrastructure & stewardship): The library expansion, targeted AI learning opportunities, a focus on process improvement, and on-going institutional planning are ensuring USC Upstate is optimizing for the future.

Despite sector turbulence, USC Upstate delivered a positive FY24–25 story with greater support, attractive new programs tied to workforce demand, visible wins in student outcomes and athletics, and measurable early progress on Greater 2030's pillars. The university exits the fiscal year with stronger enrollment momentum and a clearer bridge from "college to career," consistent with its mission of advancing social and economic mobility in the Upstate.

Risk assessment, mitigation, and legislative options

In health care, state and national projections point to persistent RN shortages; policymakers have already targeted funds to expand nursing education because unmet demand threatens access to care across the Upstate. If USC Upstate cannot meet output goals in nursing, local hospitals feel the shortfall first—unmet demand threatens access to care across the Upstate.

Mitigation underway: expanding DNP/graduate pathways, high NCLEX performance, and deepening health care partnerships.

The Upstate's growth, anchored by manufacturing and logistics, depends on a steady pipeline of graduates. Failure to deliver college-to-career outcomes risks delaying or forfeiting expansions and new investment. When talent pipelines thin, project risk and hiring frictions rise so USC Upstate continues to embrace the Upstate Talent Forum and industry collaborations.

Mitigation underway: diversified employer partnerships, new industry-aligned programs (e.g., industrial engineering), and work-based learning to anchor demand; sustained regional workforce investments and internship/apprenticeship to keep expansions on-track.

Options for the General Assembly

USC Upstate is strategically positioned in South Carolina's advanced manufacturing corridor, serving a region anchored by major companies like BMW, Michelin, GE, Lockheed Martin, and Milliken. With 94% of its students from South Carolina, Upstate fulfills a critical public mission but receives $2,106 less per in-state student than peer institutions, resulting in an annual funding gap of $8.8 million. This underfunding limits USC Upstate's ability to support other critical workforce needs in the growing Upstate region, including healthcare. It directly impacts the launch, expansion, or sustainability of key academic programs aligned with regional workforce needs.

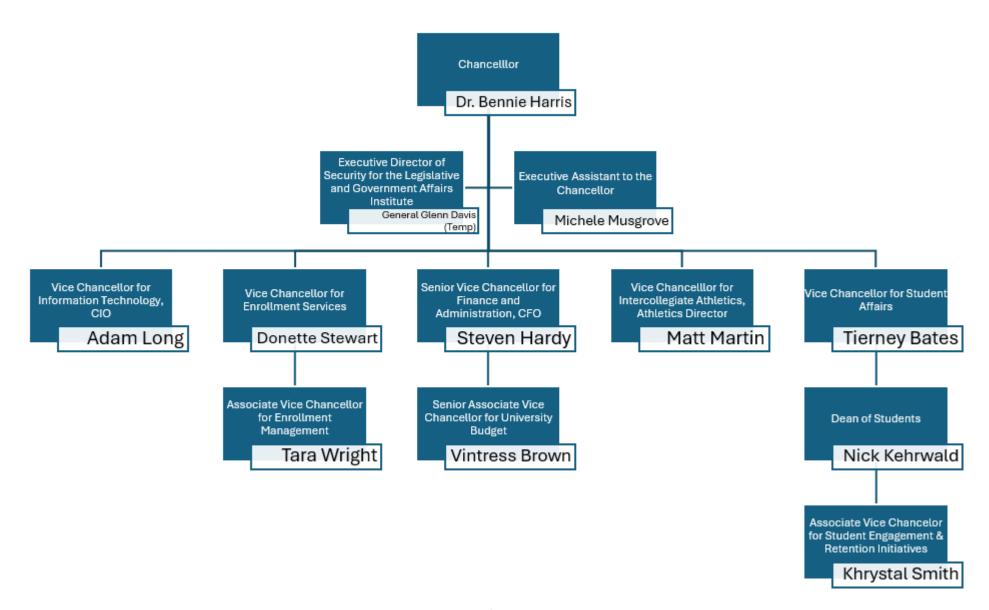

- 1. Bring USC Upstate funding up to at least the average of peer institutions in the state. The $8.8M annual gap will unlock transformative academic programs and regional partnerships that power South Carolina's economic engine.
- 2. Support nursing facilities infrastructure, faculty salaries, and student scholarships to address the critical nursing shortage.
- 3. Support engineering facilities infrastructure, faculty salaries, and student scholarships to meet the growing manufacturing needs in the Upstate region of South Carolina.

USC Upstate's FY24–25 results show momentum, but the risks above such as aid instability, faculty/clinical bottlenecks, and limited resources to expand programs to meet state workforce needs carry outsized public consequences if unaddressed. The mitigation steps outlined here, paired with targeted state action, keep Greater 2030 on track while protecting the Upstate region's health and economy.
