AGENCY'S DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS

The College of Charleston (hereafter, "the College"), including its component, the University of Charleston, South Carolina (or Graduate School), remains guided by its 10-year strategic plan Tradition & Transformation (2020–2030). This plan, anchored in three pillars – Student Success, Academic Distinction, and Employee Success – continues to provide a clear roadmap for decision-making, investments, and accountability. Strategic priorities are measured through key indicators such as retention and graduation rates, student participation in experiential learning, financial health, employee turnover, and satisfaction metrics from the Great Colleges to Work For survey.

Fiscal year 2024–2025 marked President Andrew Hsu's sixth year of leadership, and the College advanced significantly on several fronts. Student Success was strengthened by the acquisition of 106 Coming Street and 99 St. Philip Street to expand on-campus housing, easing affordability pressures on surrounding neighborhoods. Curricular expansion included the approval of new academic programs: a B.A. in General Engineering, a B.S. in Engineering and Business, a B.S. in Entrepreneurship, an RN-to-BSN program, and a graduate certificate in Geospatial Analysis – each aligned with state and regional workforce needs.

The pillar of Academic Distinction was underscored by the College's invitation to shelter a chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, a historic affirmation of the quality of its liberal arts and sciences curriculum and strong faculty in those disciplines. Research and creative activity continued to gain visibility, with faculty and students participating in national conferences and securing external recognition. National attention also came through the President's keynote at the ATMAE Conference, interviews with Forbes Books and Charleston Regional Business Journal, and sustained media coverage showcasing CofC's role in workforce development and academic innovation.

In Employee Success, the College continued to invest in professional development and foster a culture of feedback and collaboration. Division-level gatherings, open forums, and town halls allowed for both accountability and dialogue across campus. Employee engagement remains central to the College's operational philosophy, as demonstrated by steady satisfaction metrics and controlled turnover rates.

Financially, the College demonstrated resilience and prudent stewardship. Since FY21, structural margins have built the fund balance from $1.7M to $89.2M. In FY25, a $25M planned transfer from reserves funded a strategic project, but operations replenished this draw entirely, leaving the fund balance unchanged while underscoring the strength of current-year results. Philanthropy set a record, with gifts exceeding $29M (plus another $4M in grants), and donor engagement expanded through regional and national events hosted by the President.

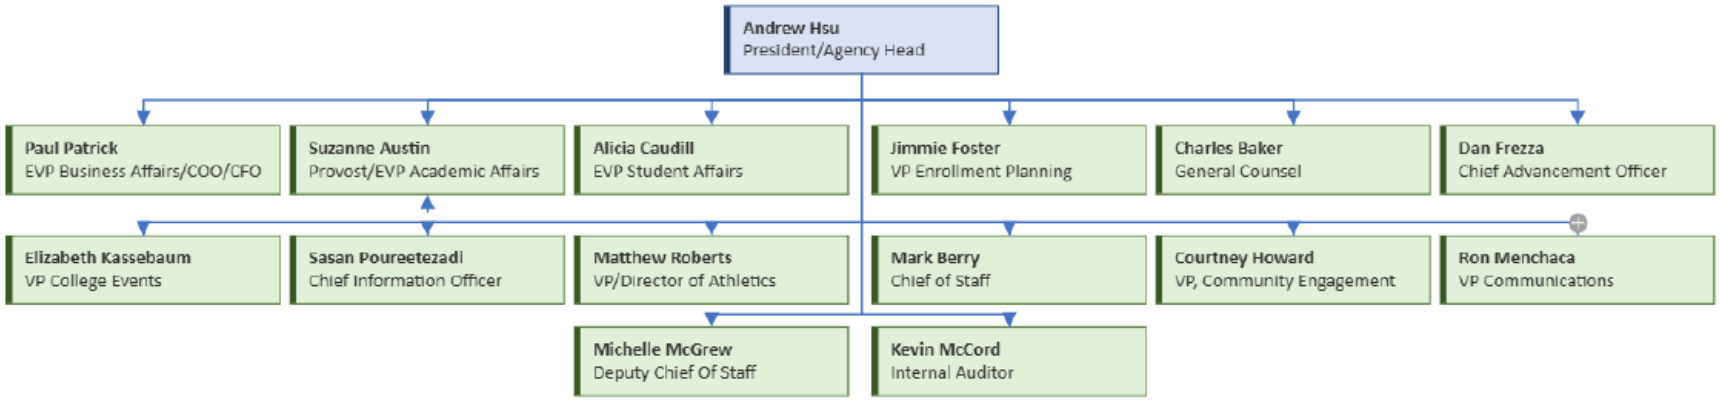

Finally, the College's commitment to community and statewide impact remained evident. Leadership engaged legislative partners through testimony before the S.C. House and Senate, receptions in Columbia and Washington, D.C., and direct advocacy for key projects, such as the Coming Street Commons initiative (student housing complex). The university's role in Charleston's livability efforts and its partnerships across government, nonprofits, and industry reinforced its reputation as both a cultural and economic anchor for the region and the state.

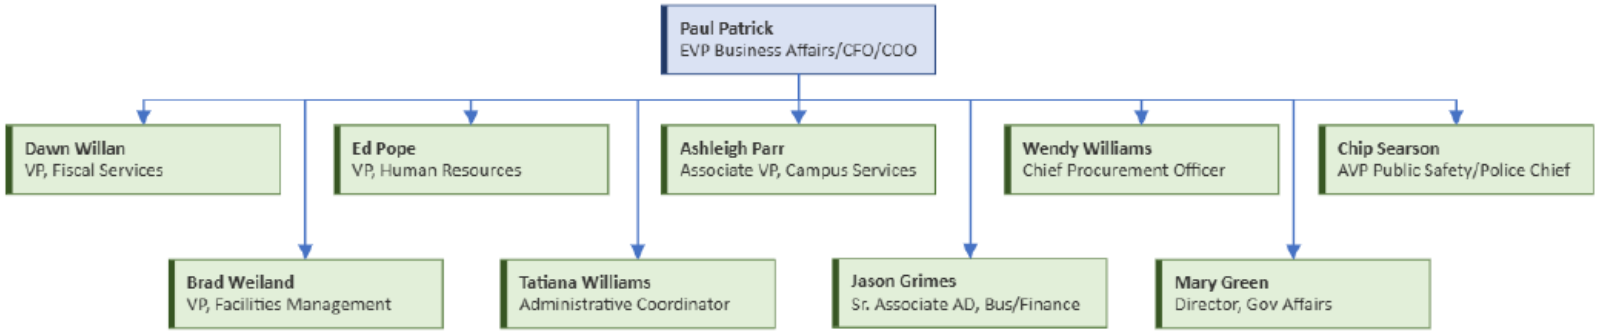

Conclusion

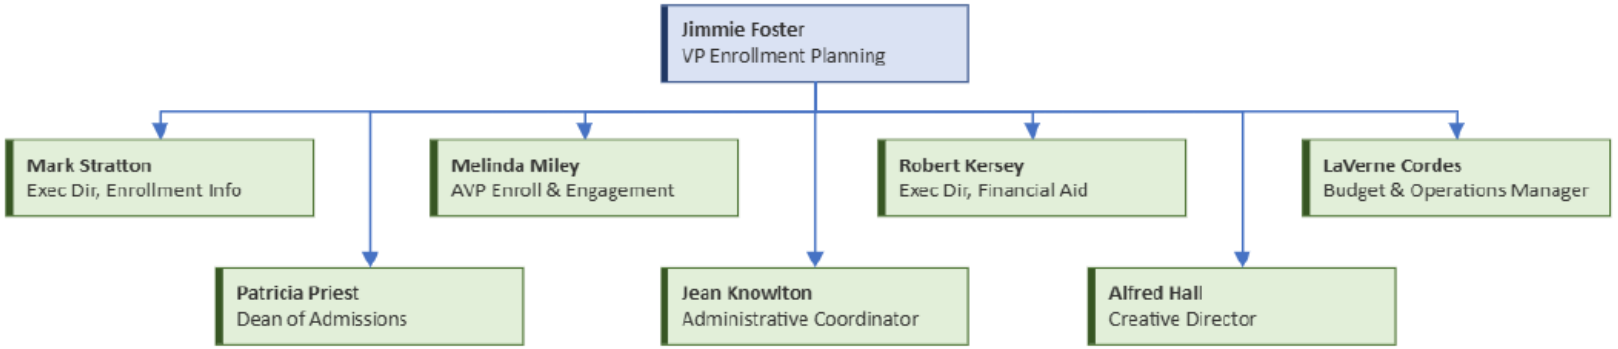

The College of Charleston enters FY25–26 with forward momentum. Retention and graduation metrics remain on target, new academic offerings strengthen its relevance, and financial and philanthropic results reflect institutional health. The College's aspiration to become a national university within the Carnegie Classification framework is increasingly visible and attainable. By continuing to align budget priorities, academic innovation, and community partnerships with the Tradition & Transformation strategic plan, the College of Charleston is shaping a future that honors its history while ensuring its impact as a national leader in higher education.
