AGENCY'S DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS

As a leading public regional university, the University of South Carolina Upstate delivers an outstanding, career-focused education through rigorous academics, community-based learning, applied research, and a vibrant campus community. Guided by its Greater 2030 strategic plan, USC Upstate continues to advance its public mission by expanding access, strengthening student completion, deepening regional partnerships, and aligning academic programs with South Carolina's workforce needs.

Founded in 1967, USC Upstate serves as a key producer of talent for the Upstate region and the state. Located along the I-85 corridor in Spartanburg between Greenville and Charlotte, the University is positioned at the center of one of South Carolina's most dynamic economic regions. USC Upstate's academic portfolio, community engagement, and student success initiatives continue to support social and economic mobility for students, families, employers, and communities across the state.

USC Upstate closed FY25-26 with strong momentum in enrollment, academic innovation, public recognition, and regional workforce alignment. In fall 2025, the University welcomed its largest incoming class since 2019, with first-time college enrollment totaling more than 850 students. This growth occurred during a period when many institutions continued to experience enrollment pressure from demographic shifts and post-pandemic recovery challenges.

Enrollment growth was supported by a combination of expanded student pathways, focused marketing and recruitment, improved transfer options, stronger retention efforts, new workforce-aligned programs, and industry partnerships. USC Upstate continued enrollment growth across total headcount, undergraduate enrollment, and graduate enrollment, with a 2025-2026 increase of 6.03 percent in total headcount, a 5.93 percent increase in undergraduate headcount, and a 7.09 percent increase in graduate headcount.

Programmatically, FY25-26 continued USC Upstate's shift toward high-demand fields and college-to-career design. The University welcomed the first cohort of 32 students in Industrial Engineering, a program designed with a Lab in Industry component that provides hands-on experience with 10 local manufacturers. This model connects academic preparation directly to the advanced manufacturing corridor and reflects the University's commitment to preparing graduates for industries that are central to South Carolina's economy.

USC Upstate also strengthened pathways into teaching and other regional workforce needs. TEACHSpartanburg, launched with Spartanburg Community College and Spartanburg School District 3, established a seamless route from high school to teacher certification. The Upstate Talent Forum returned for its third year, bringing employers, educators, and community leaders together to align education with workforce needs and prepare for demographic shifts affecting the labor market. In response to these shifting market needs, USC Upstate launched stand-alone certificates and new degree programs to meet regional needs including the BSBA in Hospitality and Tourism Management. We have also partnered with Risepoint to provide online undergraduate and graduate programs that meet the needs of working adults.

Significant student success investments advanced during the fiscal year. USC Upstate dedicated The Learning Commons, the University's first new building in 15 years, as a space for learning, collaboration, and reflection. This investment complements broader student support strategies and reflects the University's focus on persistence, completion, and belonging.

USC Upstate continued to expand access through community partnerships. Big Mo, launched in partnership with Spartanburg Academic Movement and Movement 2030, provides personalized guidance, reminders, financial aid support, and community-based resources to seniors in Spartanburg County's nine public high schools. Students who enroll through the initiative may become eligible for direct financial awards if they attend USC Upstate or a partner institution. USC Upstate also continued to emphasize Promise Scholars and expanded support for first-generation and Pell-eligible students through initiatives such as increasing FAFSA completion support and partnership with FirstGen Forward. We are also responding to student life needs through initiatives such as Spartans Helping Spartans and mental health programming partnerships.

External support remained a major strength. The Chief Justice Donald W. Beatty Center for Justice & Society received a $1,353,520 grant from The Duke Endowment to establish the CHAMPS Beatty Center, a medical-legal partnership designed to support families across Spartanburg, Union, and Cherokee counties by addressing civil legal issues that affect children's health and well-being. The partnership focuses on health-harming legal needs such as substandard housing, access to public benefits, and food insecurity that often go untreated in traditional health care settings.

USC Upstate also continued to benefit from major philanthropic investments in nursing and experiential learning. The University received a $2 million gift from the Bedford Falls Foundation-DAF to establish the Joanne and William Conway Nursing Scholarship Fund, which will provide 108 scholarships annually for four years, and a $4.9 million Mellon Foundation grant to expand internship opportunities in the humanities. These investments support student affordability, career readiness, and workforce-aligned pathways in areas central to the University's public mission.

USC Upstate also earned significant external recognition for access, outcomes, and institutional performance. U.S. News & World Report ranked USC Upstate No. 1 Best College for Veterans and No. 2 Top Public School in the South among regional colleges. The 2025 Carnegie Classifications recognized USC Upstate as a Professions-focused Baccalaureate Medium institution and a Higher Access, Medium Earnings institution, and the University also earned the new Research Colleges and Universities designation. In addition, USC Upstate was named one of six recipients of the U.S. Department of Education's Postsecondary Success Recognition Program, affirming the University's commitment to equitable access and student success.

Athletics and institutional visibility also strengthened the USC Upstate brand. Spartan athletics celebrated four Big South Championships, with men's golf, baseball, and women's soccer each earning their first championship titles and softball securing a repeat win. Student-athletes also delivered the University's best-ever finish in the Buddy Sasser Cup standings, with a third-place ranking. USC Upstate also expanded athletic opportunities for developmental soccer and competitive dance and cheer. These achievements contributed to institutional pride, student engagement, alumni connection, and regional visibility.

Internal and external factors shaping performance

Situated on the I-85 manufacturing corridor, USC Upstate continues to operate in a region shaped by rapid economic growth, workforce demand, demographic shifts, and heightened competition for students. During FY25-26, the University used Greater 2030 to organize its response to these opportunities and pressures. The five strategic priorities provided a framework for aligning academic distinctiveness, enrollment growth, completion, community impact, and future-focused stewardship.

- Spartan Distinct (academic distinctiveness): USC Upstate strengthened its academic identity through the launch of industrial engineering, continued industry-informed program development, the National Security and Government Institute, the Beatty Center for Justice & Society, and other workforce-aligned academic pathways.

- Spartan Recruit (enrollment and access): The University welcomed its largest incoming class since 2019 and advanced access strategies through Big Mo, Spartanburg Promise Scholars, stronger transfer pathways, focused marketing and recruitment, online program development, and collaboration with community partners. Athletics launched development soccer teams for student-athletes seeking a competitive pathway, and competitive dance and cheer began in Fall 2025, boosting recruitment among high school students wanting to continue their sport at the collegiate level.

- Spartan Success (student outcomes): The Learning Commons, student support initiatives, mental health programming, first-generation and Pell-eligible student supports, internship expansion, and retention-focused collaboration strengthened the student experience and supported persistence toward graduation. The 2025 – 2026 season also brought student-athletes best-ever academic performance with teams posting a cumulative GPA of 3.36 for the academic year.

- Spartan Partners (regional impact): USC Upstate deepened partnerships through TEACHSpartanburg, Spartanburg Academic Movement, Movement 2030, the Upstate Talent Forum, Sherman College of Chiropractic, The Duke Endowment-funded CHAMPS Beatty Center, Mellon internships, regional employers, and health care and manufacturing partners.

- Spartan Future (infrastructure and stewardship): Facilities investment, online program growth, process improvement, industry partnerships, enrollment growth planning, and continued attention to campus readiness positioned USC Upstate to support future growth while stewarding human, financial, and physical resources.

Despite ongoing challenges across higher education, USC Upstate's FY25-26 results show continued progress in enrollment growth, workforce alignment, student access, public recognition, facilities investment, and regional partnership. The University exits the fiscal year with stronger momentum and a clearer bridge from college to career, consistent with its mission of advancing social and economic mobility in the Upstate region and across South Carolina.

Risk assessment, mitigation, and legislative options

USC Upstate's operating environment remains affected by several external risks. Competition for students continues to intensify from other colleges and universities as well as employers offering attractive, high-paying jobs that do not require a college degree. Changing federal and state financial aid regulations create uncertainty for students and families and require institutions to adapt quickly. Public skepticism regarding the return on investment of a college degree also makes it increasingly important to demonstrate the long-term benefits of higher education through transparent outcomes and strong workforce alignment.

The demographic enrollment cliff and declining birth rates continue to affect the pool of traditional college-aged students. Expanding graduate programs and online programming helps USC Upstate to remain relevant in this changing demographic climate. At the same time, USC Upstate's enrollment growth creates its own capacity challenges. University housing was at capacity for 2025-2026. As the University serves more students, it must ensure adequate housing, classroom capacity, student services, technology, staffing, and academic infrastructure to support student success. Affordability and students' financial challenges remain central concerns for recruitment, persistence, and graduation.

Mitigation underway: USC Upstate is responding through diversified recruitment strategies, stronger transfer pathways, online program growth, student support expansion, Big Mo and Promise Scholars access initiatives, retention-focused collaboration, employer partnerships, work-based learning, and academic programs aligned with regional workforce demand.

In health care, state and national projections continue to point to persistent nursing workforce shortages. If USC Upstate cannot continue expanding and sustaining nursing pathways, local health care systems and communities in the Upstate are directly affected. Investments in nursing facilities, faculty capacity, clinical partnerships, and student scholarships remain essential to meeting the region's health care needs. The Doctor of Nursing Practice (DNP) graduated its first cohort of students in December 2025.

The Upstate's growth, anchored by manufacturing, logistics, health care, education, and public service, depends on a steady pipeline of graduates. Failure to deliver college-to-career outcomes risks delaying or constraining regional expansion and new investment. USC Upstate continues to mitigate this risk through industry-aligned programs such as industrial engineering, employer partnerships, internships, apprenticeships, transfer pathways, and regional collaborations such as the Upstate Talent Forum.

Mitigation underway: Continue expanding DNP and graduate health pathways, sustaining strong licensure outcomes, deepening clinical and employer partnerships, investing in engineering and health care infrastructure, and embedding experiential learning into academic programs.

Options for the General Assembly

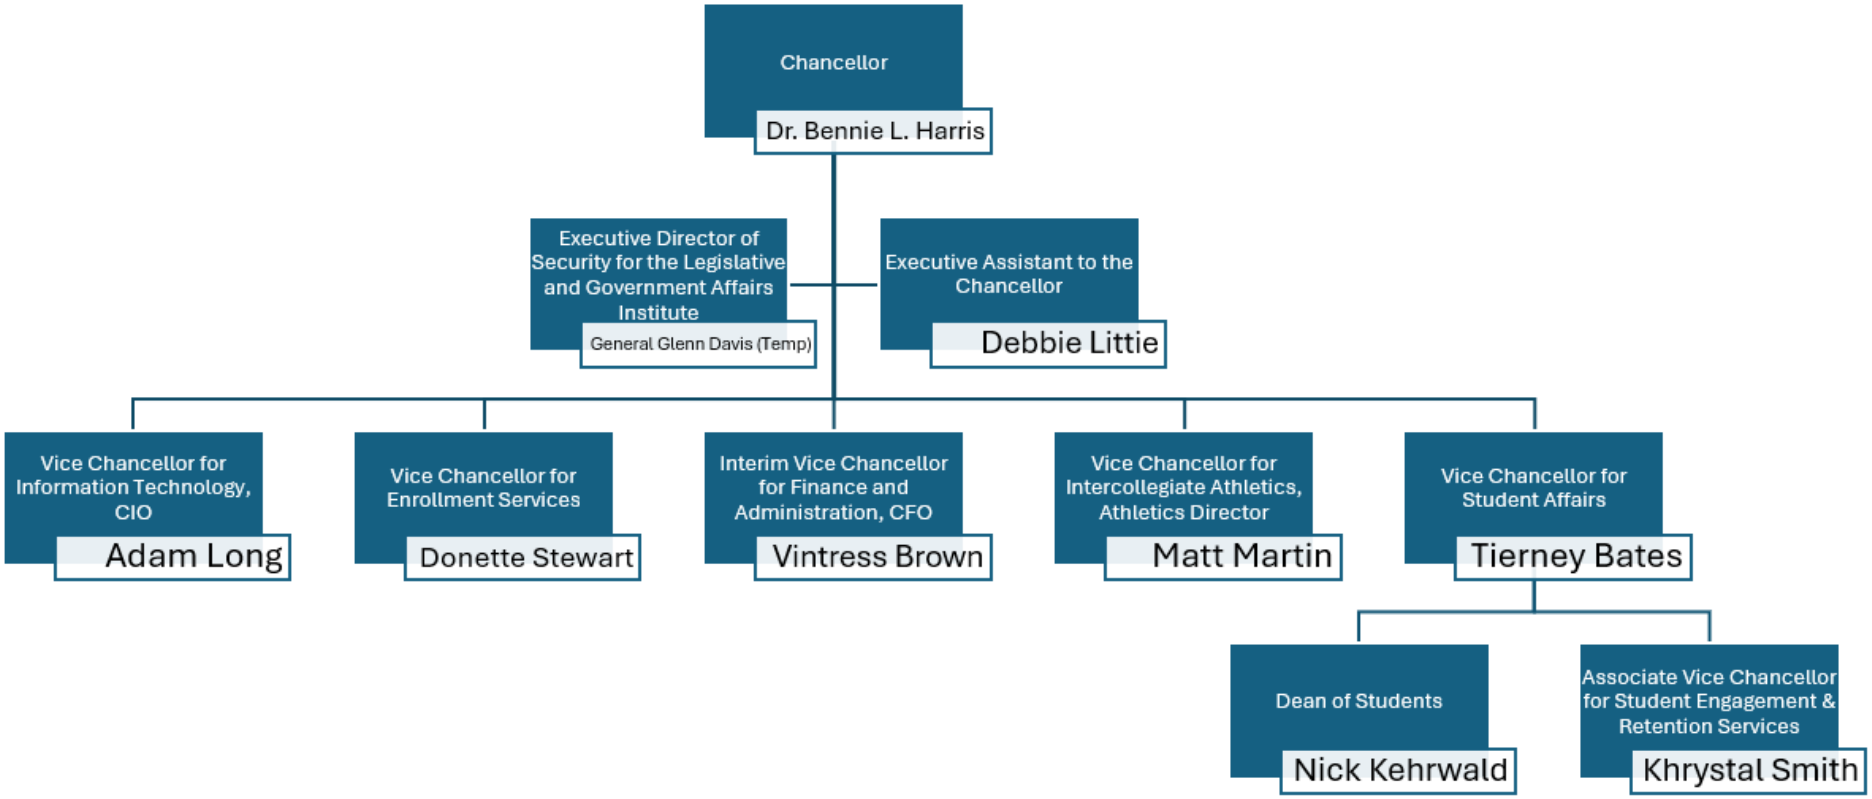

USC Upstate is strategically positioned in South Carolina's advanced manufacturing corridor and serves a region anchored by major employers in manufacturing, health care, logistics, education, and public service. The University fulfills a critical public mission by serving South Carolina students and producing graduates needed by the Upstate economy. However, sustained progress depends on state investment that matches the scale of regional workforce demand, enrollment growth, and infrastructure needs.

The General Assembly can support USC Upstate's continued momentum through targeted investment in three priority areas:

1. Bring USC Upstate funding up to at least the average of peer institutions in the state. Closing the recurring funding gap would strengthen the University's ability to sustain enrollment growth, expand student support, retain faculty and staff, and launch or scale academic programs aligned with state and regional workforce needs.
2. Support nursing facilities infrastructure, faculty salaries, clinical capacity, and student scholarships. Strategic investment in nursing is necessary to address persistent health care workforce shortages and expand access to high-quality care across the Upstate.
3. Support engineering facilities infrastructure, faculty salaries, laboratory capacity, student scholarships, and industry partnerships. Investment in engineering will help meet the growing manufacturing and advanced industry needs of the Upstate region and support South Carolina's economic competitiveness.

USC Upstate's FY25-26 results demonstrate strong momentum, but the risks associated with affordability, capacity, workforce shortages, faculty and staff recruitment, and infrastructure limitations carry public consequences if unaddressed. The mitigation steps outlined above, paired with targeted state action, will help keep Greater 2030 on track while protecting the Upstate region's health, economy, and talent pipeline.
