Fiscal Impact Summary

This bill will have no expenditure impact on the General Fund, Other Funds, or Federal Funds. This bill could increase expenses of local school districts by an amount up to $325,000, beginning in FY 2018-19 for expenses related to procedures for remediation and professional development. Expenses for local school districts could further increase if schools need to hire additional counselors to implement the provisions of this bill, or if districts choose to implement a school wide anti-bullying program.

Explanation of Fiscal Impact

Introduced on January 24, 2018

State Expenditure

This bill adds to the list of components that local school districts must include in the policy prohibiting harassment, intimidation, or bullying at school. The additions include procedures for responding to reports of harassment, intimidation, or bullying, procedures for remediation, and procedures for appealing a decision related to taking or not taking remedial action in accordance with the policy. Notice of the right to appeal must be provided to parents, guardians, and students. The appeals procedure must be consistent with other appeals procedures established by the school board and may include an appeal to the superintendent.

The Department of Education indicates that this bill affects local school districts and will have no expenditure impact on the General Fund, Other Funds, or Federal Funds.

Local Expenditure

The Department of Education indicates that this bill could increase expenses to local school districts by an amount up to $325,000. These expenses relate to procedures for remediation and the associated professional development for counseling and mediation, evidence based curriculum and programs, and restorative practices. The department indicates that in FY 2015-16, districts reported a combined 2,706 bullying and cyberbullying incidents. Based on these figures, the average estimated cost of counseling services to districts could be $120 per student, which is $40 per hour for three hours of counseling, for a total of approximately $325,000. Also, the department indicates that expenses could increase beyond the estimated $325,000 if districts have to hire additional counselors or school psychologists to implement the provisions of this bill. The average yearly school psychologist salary in the state is between $37,754 and $56,631. Additionally, expenses would also increase if districts choose to implement a school wide anti-bullying program. The estimated cost for an anti-bullying program is $2.25 per student.
